On Friday, March 11, 2022 Texas Rangers and the Harris County District Attorney raided the office of Harris County Judge Lina Hidalgo, seizing computers, telephones and other items. One month later Hidalgo's chief of staff Alex Triantaphyllis, policy director Wallis Nader, and former policy aide Aaron Dunn were indicted on charges of misuse of official information and tampering with a government record. The indictments were made for their roles in a "rigged bid" for a $10.9 million contract for Community Outreach that Hidalgo awarded to Elevate Strategies LLC, a firm owned by Felicity Pereyra, who is also tied to the Democratic National Committee. Selected over the higher-scoring University of Texas Health Science Center, Pereyra's firm had no background in the medical field, no apparent employees, and was operating out of an apartment in Montrose.

In October of 2021, instead of funding our police by hiring more officers, Hidalgo and the Harris County Commissioners Court unanimously approved spending $50 million to fight crime through planting trees, improving sidewalks and adding streetlights in distressed neighborhoods. Other plans they have approved include spending $25 million for Criminal Justice Intervention programs such as a $6 million Gun Violence Intervention program and $5 million for a Holistic Alternative Responder Team. Programs modeled after crime failing cities such as Chicago, Washington DC, and Baltimore. If they haven't worked there, why would we think they will miraculously work here?

One must wonder how these contracts are being awarded especially after knowing of the indictment charges being levied on Hidalgo's personnel.

Either vote the local Democrat party out of office in November or accept the wasteful "wealth building of friends" crime programs and allow murders, assaults, robbery and kidnappings to continue at record pace.
